

IS IT SAFE TO SCHEDULE MY MEDICAL IMAGING?

For most radiology care, your risk of exposure to COVID-19 is low.

It's normal to feel stress and anxiety during a pandemic, particularly if you are trying to decide to rebook medical appointments. The American College of Radiology suggests imaging offices make a plan to keep you and their staff safe.

During COVID-19 your imaging practice may:

SCHEDULING

Ask if you are feeling sick before scheduling your appointment

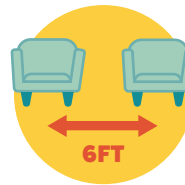

Meet with you before your appointment online or via phone

WAITING ROOM

Give you a mask

Practice social distancing

Not allow extra people

YOUR HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS

Screen staff temperatures

Wear protective gear for your care

Disinfect surfaces between patients

Your risk of exposure during medical imaging is low.
Your radiologist is always concerned about patient safety.
