

Cynthia S. Sherry, MD, FACR

Dr. Cynthia Sherry, a private practice radiologist with fellowship training in Magnetic Resonance Imaging, has been associated with Texas Health Resources, a large multi-hospital healthcare system in North Texas since 1989, at Presbyterian Hospital Dallas, a 700-bed tertiary care, level-1 trauma center community hospital through her membership in Radiology Associates of North Texas. In addition to clinical practice, her medical career is marked by diverse leadership positions within the hospital and hospital system, within her radiology group, and at many local, state, and national physician organizations.

The underlying theme driving her extra-clinical endeavors is her belief that, when supplemented by leadership training, physicians' clinical experiences uniquely equip them to approach healthcare problems innovatively and with fiscal stewardship in ways that can benefit both patients and society. She has been instrumental in promoting leadership education for physicians in her hospital and hospital system through development of the Physicians Lead! Program. She has led physician engagement across the hospital system as Founding Chair of the THR Physician Leadership Council. As President of the American College of Physician Executives (now AAPL), she oversaw the leadership education programs for physicians across the country. In connection with the American College of Radiology, she had the privilege of leading the creation and development of the Radiology Leadership Institute with the goal of providing leadership training for radiologists at every career stage.

Dr. Sherry has served in leadership positions for the American College of Radiology, the American College of Physician Executives, The Texas Radiological Society, the Texas Medical Association, and the Dallas County Medical Society. After medical school, residency and fellowship, she earned a Masters Degree in Medical Management at Carnegie Mellon University.
